ENOUT ARDEN.

He said that being in the city he would like to take in the City Hall, and after he had tired himself out in chimbing stairs and walking corridors he came back to the ground floor and remarked to the policeman

"It's seventeen years since I may this town before."

"In it ?" " Seventeen long years-long years. Did you ever hear anything in particular about a man named Phile Brago?".

"Can't remember that I did." to Ever see anything in the papers about his mysterious disappearance."

"Guess not." Well, you were too young. I am Phil : Brace, and seventeen years ago this month I disappeared from my home in Oa I ad county in a myster ous manner, and I've never been heard of since. I am now on my way home, and shall be there to night." Why, that's quite a romance."

"Reckon it is. I'm a out of Enoch Ar. den, you see. I left a wife and two children, and have never sent them a word or line. No doubt they have long mourned "You may find your wife married to an-

A PRACTICAL STORY.

Dr. Wilm, the clever physician, who marnied a princess of Wurtemberg last year, much to the disgnst of her noble relatives. is said to have made her very happy. He has a great practice at Breslau, and his accomplished wife aids him in the care of those of his patients who are too poor to groeure the necessary remedies. The bapfism of their little daughter was the occasion recently of many pleasant rejoicings among the grateful people. The story of the princess and the doctor is essentially a modern romance-practical to the last degree; but is none the worse for that.

A HORSE WITHOUT HAIR.

Cincinnati people are wondering over a horse which is quite destitute of hair. He has no mane whatever, and his tail consists only of a hairless stump, and even inside the ears no hair can be found. The horse has not been shaved, for the closest examination fails to discover the slightest sign of a bristle on any part of the body. The horse was four years old, was never sick, and until a year ago was like others of his kind. Physicians who have examined him can discover no signs of disease, and are at a loss to account for the case.

We put up with folly more patiently than we do with injustice.

There is a mode of presenting that gives value to everything.

No grander thing can a man do than to give a helping hand to a young ma. who has been discouraged.

Modesty promotes worth, but conceals it just as leaves aid the growth f fruit, and bides it from view.
